Memorandum on the Rainfall of June and July and the Probable Amount during August and September 1954

1. WEATHER IN INDIA IN JUNE AND JULY

June.—The Arabian Sea branch of the monsoon advanced into Travancore-Cochin on the 31st May as a feeble current. It, however, strengthened on the next day, and advancing into Malabar-South Kanara caused very heavy rain there. By the 7th, the monsoon had extended to the south Konkan, south Deccan (Desh), south and northwest Hyderabad, and most parts of the south Peninsula. It was particularly vigorous in Malabar-South Kanara and the south Konkan on the 5th when widespread very heavy rain fell in these areas.

A depression formed in the east Arabian Sea by the evening of 8th, centred about 160 miles west of Bombay. Taking a north north-westerly course, it crossed the Saurashtra coast between Veraval and Porbandar on the 10th afternoon and filled up by the next day. In association with the formation and movement of this depression, the monsoon advanced into the north Konkan, north Deccan (Desh) and the adjoining districts of Gujarat on the 8th, and into Saurashtra and Kutch on the 11th. Its further extension into the remaining parts of Gujarat took place on the 13th, on which date locally heavy to very heavy rain occurred in south Gujarat and the south Saurashtra coast. Vigorous monsoon conditions also prevailed in Travancore-Cochin on the 10th, in Malabar-South Kanara on the 10th and 11th, and in the south Konkan on the 14th and 15th. A very heavy fall of 9.3 in. of rain was recorded at Kozhikode on the 11th, as a result of which the local All India Radio Station there got flooded and stopped functioning temporarily.

The Bay of Bengal branch of the monsoon had advanced upto the northeast Bay of Bengal by the 29th May. Under the influence of a low pressure wave from the east, the monsoon extended into Assam on the 1st June. It, however, remained restricted to that area till the 8th. Another spell of disturbed weather in the northeast Bay of Bengal between the 5th and 8th, served to usher the monsoon into West Bengal on the 8th. Its further advance into Orissa occurred on the 13th, and into north coastal Andhradesa, Chota Nagpur and Bihar on the 16th.

The monsoon extended into Madhya Pradesh and south Madhya Bharat on the 17th and 18th respectively, under influence of an upper air trough over east Madhya Pradesh and neighbourhood. A spell of vigorous monsoon conditions prevailed over the north Konkan and adjoining Gujarat between the 19th and 22nd, when locally very heavy rain occurred there. According to newspaper reports, some parts of Bombay had rainfall as heavy as 11 in. on the 21st as a result of which, the communications in the city were badly disturbed. The monsoon was active in Madhya Pradesh, Deccan (Desh) and Hyderabad between the 18th and 20th and again in southwest Madhya Pradesh on the 22nd. By this time, the Brahmaputra and her numerous tributaries had risen in spate, and about 45 villages in Assam were reported to have been submerged and more than 5,000 people rendered homeless in the north Lakhimpur district. The Teesta river in sub-Himalayan West Bengal also rose in spate and inundated about 30,000 acres of cultivated land. The monsoon remained generally weak over the Peninsula during the last week of the month. It, however, strengthened and was active over west Madhya Pradesh, Deccan (Desh) and Hyderabad on the 27th in association with the westward passage of a low pressure wave across the central parts of the country between the 26th and 28th. A few very heavy falls occurred in the north Konkan and Malabar-South Kanara on the 26th, and in east Hyderabad and west Madhya Pradesh on the 27th. The monsoon remained active in Gangetic West Bengal on the 26th and in west Assam and sub-Himalayan West Bengal on the 27th and 29th. It was also vigorous in sub-Himalayan West Bengal and adjoining districts of Bihar and Assam on the 30th. Cherrapunji recorded 47 in. of rain between the 28th and 30th.

No depression or storm formed in the Bay of Bengal during the month of June, so that even at the end of the month the monsoon was yet to extend into Uttar Pradesh, northwest India, Vindhya Pradesh and north Madhya Bharat. The north Punjab (I) and northwest Uttar Pradesh had, however, fairly widespread thundershowers on the 5th and locally on the 6th.

The rainfall for June was in large excess in sub-Himalayan West Bengal, in moderate excess in Malabar-South Kanara and in slight excess in west Rajasthan, Saurashtra and Kutch and coastal Andhra-desa. It was normal in Assam, Orissa, the Konkan, Deccan (Desh), north Hyderabad and Travancore-Cochin, in slight defect in Gangetic West Bengal, Bihar, the Punjab (I), east Rajasthan, Gujarat, south Hyderabad, and Mysore, in moderate defect in Chota Nagpur, Vindhya Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh and Tamilnad and in large defect in Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Bharat and Rayalaseema. Averaged over the plains of India, the rainfall during June was 14 per cent. in defect.

July.—The month commenced with exceptionally heavy rains in the north Konkan, south Gujarat, southwest Madhya Bharat and sub-Himalayan West Bengal. On the 2nd, Bulsar in south Gujarat reported 18 in. of rain. Panvel (north Konkan) 15 in. and Bombay 9 in.; Cooch Behar had 7 in. and 10 in. of rain respectively on the 1st and 3rd. Kathiawara in Madhya Bharat also reported a heavy downpour of 17 in. within 5 hours on the 2nd. The monsoon advanced into east Uttar Pradesh by the 3rd. By about this time, reports appeared in the Press of floods in the river Kosi, which sweeping across Saharsa and Darbhanga districts of north Bihar, affected a population of about 4 lacs of people. Simultaneous floods were also reported from the north Kamrup district of Assam. The first monsoon depression in the Bay of Bengal formed by the 5th morning about 100 miles east of Puri. It crossed the Orissa coast by the early morning of the 6th and weakened into a low pressure area. The latter moved to north Madhya Pradesh by the 7th morning and became unimportant there by the same afternoon. The depression caused a general strengthening of the monsoon over the Peninsula where well-distributed rain occurred in most parts between the 5th and 7th. The monsoon also extended to Vindhya Pradesh on the 6th. Another depression formed over Saurashtra by the 7th morning. Moving westnorthwestwards, it emerged into the northeast Arabian Sea by the 9th morning, recurved and merged with the seasonal low over Sind by the 11th. This depression served to extend the monsoon into northwest India, west Uttar Pradesh and north Madhya Bharat by the 9th. A few very heavy falls occurred in these areas and in north Gujarat between the 9th and 12th. The monsoon was generally strong in Saurashtra and Kutch between the 8th and 13th, in north Gujarat on the 11th and 12th and in east Hyderabad, south coastal Andhradesa and west Madhya Pradesh on the 10th with an exceptionally heavy fall of 11.8 in. of rain at Khammameth on the 10th. A low formed over Gangetic West Bengal on the 14th morning. Moving westnorthwestwards, it lay over north Madhya Bharat and neighbourhood by the 16th morning and weakened there by the 18th. In association with the progress of this low, strong monsoon conditions generally prevailed over northeast India, the central parts of the country, east Rajasthan and the western half of the Peninsula on the 15th and 16th, the rainfall being particularly heavy over the region comprising of south Madhya Bharat, extreme north Deccan (Desh) and adjoining parts of northwest Hyderabad and southwest Madhya Pradesh on the 15th. Rainfall extended to Uttar Pradesh on the 16th and to the Punjab(I) on the 16th. Locally heavy to very heavy rain occurred in the north Punjab(I) on the 18th and in northwest Uttar Pradesh on the 20th. These heavy rains were responsible for the floods in the river Ravi. Good rainfall occurred over most parts of the Peninsula on the 18th and 19th with locally very heavy falls in the extreme south Konkan and Malabar-South Kanara. The monsoon was generally active over the country outside the plains of northwest India during the last week of the month, being vigorous in sub-Himalayan West Bengal between the 25th and 28th and again on the 31st, in west Assam on the 24th, 26th and 27th, in the Konkan on the last two days of the month and in coastal Saurashtra on the 30th. According to newspaper reports, the surging swollen nine rivers in north Bihar including the Kosi submerged extensive areas of land in the four districts of Bihar, washing away crops and seedlings over an area of 800 to 1,000 square miles. Similar flood havoc was reported from Assam and sub-Himalayan West Bengal during the last week.

The rainfall during July 1954 was in large excess in the Bay Islands, the Konkan, Deccan (Desh), Rayalaseema, Tamilnad and Mysore and in slight to moderate excess in Assam, sub-Himalayan West Bengal, Bihar, the plains of the Punjab(I), east Rajasthan, west Madhya Pradesh, Saurashtra and Kutch, Hyderabad and coastal Andhradesa. It was normal in Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Bharat, Gujarat and Malabar-South Kanara, in slight defect in west Rajasthan, Vindhya Pradesh, east Madhya Pradesh and Travancore-Cochin and in moderate to large defect in Gangetic West Bengal, Orissa and Chota Nagpur. Averaged over the plains of India the rainfall during July was 8 per cent. in excess.

June and July combined.—The Arabian Sea branch of the southwest monsoon set in over Travancore-Cochin on the 31st May which is nearly the usual date. It steadily advanced further and established itself over the Peninsula by the middle of June. The Bay of Bengal branch advanced into Assam on the 1st June but thereafter its westward advance was comparatively slow. Its further extension into West Bengal occurred on the 8th June and in the rest of northeast India and in Madhya Pradesh between the 13th and 17th June. The monsoon extended to east Uttar Pradesh on the 3rd July—about a fortnight later than the normal date—, and into northwest India only by the 9th July. July was a month of very well-distributed rain over most parts of the country and the deficiencies of rainfall over the Punjab (I), Uttar Pradesh, the central parts of the country, Rayalaseema, Mysore and Tamilnad were nearly made up during this month. Both the months were characterised by the non-occurrence of the usual number of monsoon depressions forming in the north Bay and moving westnorthwestwards and also by the occurrence of low pressure waves from the east moving westwards rapidly across the Peninsula. The seasonal floods occurred in Assam, sub-Himalayan West Bengal and north Bihar this year also but according to newspaper reports, were more severe, probably due to heavy rains occurring almost daily along the Eastern Himalayas during the last ten days of the month.

Rainfall during June and July was in moderate excess in the Bay Islands, sub-Himalayan West Bengal, the Konkan, Deccan (Desh), north Hyderabad, Rayalaseema, Tamilnad and Mysore and in slight excess in east Rajasthan, Saurashtra and Kutch, south Hyderabad, coastal Andhradesa and Malabar-South Kanara. It was normal in Assam, Bihar, west Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I), West Madhya Pradesh, Gujarat, and Travancore-Cochin, in slight defect in east Uttar Pradesh, west Rajasthan and Madhya Bharat and in moderate defect in Gangetic West Bengal, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Vindhya Pradesh and east Madhya Pradesh. Averaged over the plains of India rainfall during June and July was just the normal. Data from Jammu and Kashmir are not available.

2. CONDITIONS HAVING INFLUENCE ON THE RAINS OF AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER 1954

A forecast, or rather, foreshadowing of the monsoon rainfall of June to September was issued early in June. Recent data have been examined to see if any useful supplementary foreshadowing for the remainder of the season can now be given. The relevant data are the following:—

Indian Pressure.—In June, pressure was generally below normal throughout the country. In July, pressure was nearly normal in the Peninsula and slightly below normal in the rest of the country except Northeast India where it was in slight excess. Averaged over the plains, the pressure departure was —0.9 mb. in June and —0.2 mb. in July.

Snow in the mountain regions of Northwest India.—The snowfall reports received from the Western Himalayas for June and July indicate that snowfall was nearly normal.

Indian Ocean Pressure.—At Mauritius pressure was in defect by 0".053 in June and by 0".049 in July.

Java Rain.—The monthly rainfall departures from October 1953 to February 1954 were —86 per cent., 0, —17 per cent., —1 per cent. and +15 per cent. respectively.

South Rhodesia Rain.—Rainfall from October 1953 to April 1954 was in defect by 4.7".

South American Pressure.—Pressure departures were as follows:—

	Buenos Aires	Cordoba	Santiago
June 1954	+0.2 mm	+0.5 mm	+0.1 mm.
July 1954	+0.7 mm.	+0.2 mm.	+0.7 mm.

Punjab Temperature Range.—Departures of the Punjab Temperature Range were as follows:—

April 1954	+3.2°F
May 1954	+2.7°F

Indo-Gangetic River Discharges.—Mean departure of the total river discharges during April and May 1954 was +88 (in 10,000 cusecs).

3. INFERENCES FROM THE DATA

In foreshadowing the August and September rainfall in the Peninsula (taken to consist of Saurashtra and Kutch, Gujarat, the Konkan, Deccan (Desh), Madhya Pradesh and Hyderabad) the chief factors in the order of decreasing reliability, as judged by the available data are South Rhodesia Rain, Pressure distribution in India, Mauritius Pressure and Java Rain. This year South Rhodesia Rain is slightly favourable and the remaining factors are very favourable. The statistical analysis indicates that there is a four to one chance that the total rainfall of August and September 1954 in the Peninsula will be above 111 per cent. of the normal.

For Northwest India (taken to consist of the Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) including PEPSU and Delhi, and Rajasthan) the factors used in the order of decreasing reliability, as judged by the available data, are South Rhodesia Rain, South American Pressure, Indo-Gangetic River Discharges, Indian Pressure and Punjab Temperature Range. This year Indo-Gangetic River Discharges and Punjab Temperature Range are very unfavourable and the remaining factors are favourable. The factors are conflicting but statistical analysis indicates that there is a four to one chance that the total rainfall of Northwest India in August and September 1954 will not be below 71 per cent. of the normal.

4. SUMMARY

The total rainfall of August and September 1954 will be slightly above normal in the Peninsula and likely to be slightly below normal in Northwest India.
